BRIGHT-LIPS TIPS AND TRICKS

- "You know you've found the right shade when it enhances your skin tone, makes your eyes look brighter and gives your face a lift," says Scott Brown's head of artistry, Paul Henington.
- "Some people can look like on black skin," says Karen. "Using the colour wheel or placed on a no-pigment base."
- "The brighter you go on the lips, the more simple the rest of your makeup should be," says Karen.
- "Brights can drain the skin, so always warm it up with some red shades, and make sure you cover up sunburns and dark circles," advises Kay.
- "To find your perfect pink, match it to your gums," says Chase.
- "Bubblegum lips are best teamed with a more busy, not loads of liner and eye makeup. When you need to look like Jordin," says Karen.
- "Red with blue undertones (like cherry) make teeth seem whiter. But blue-based pinks (such as bubblegum pink or fuchsia) play up any yellowness, so avoid if your teeth are off-white," says Cosmo's Beauty Director, Ingeborg van Lotringen.
- "To get the exact colour you see in the tube, first fill out your lips with a light-toned primer to neutralise any pigment in them," says Chase.
- "Perfectly lined and painted bold lips have a retro, 'Mad Men' feel," says Poppy. "Load colour slicked on straight from the tube is more modern-looking."
- "I also guarantee bright lips, apply a clear slick balm and dab a high-pigment lipstick on top with your finger," suggests Chase. "Then for a little more colour each time."
- "To keep things modern, never match your lipstick with your hair polish or your outfit," says Paul.

This is the one we want to tell. I have been a woman, I am still a woman, and I always will be a woman. I find it easier to talk about the gender issues in a man's world than it is to talk about my own experience as a woman in a man's world. I've experienced both sides of the coin, and I don't believe there is a correct or incorrect way to do either. I choose to believe that men and women are of equal value and importance, and I do so with all my heart. I have a nephew, a daughter, and five granddaughters, and I love them all dearly. I am the mother of a grown daughter, a son-in-law, two grandsons, and two granddaughters, and I love them all dearly. Men and women are of equal value. The recognition of the human dignity of women is the basic principle of equality that needs to be upheld at every level of the justice system, in all social contexts, in every relationship, and in every aspect of our lives. At the same time, men must never question the fundamental equality of women, because the oppression of women is not a gender-specific phenomenon. The men who suffer from sexism are real. What we women in society and within our own families suffer from on a daily basis, they experience every day. No matter what color they are, how old they are, how rich they are, how great or small their intellect is, men face daily challenges that our society deems unworthy or unworthy of men's attention. We must stand with them. Men need to know that we are with them and for them. Women have the same needs.
